

Primary, Secondary & Social Care Systems Leadership Series

Introducing our informative and engaging systems leadership series. This series of four virtual masterclasses are based upon the Northwest NHS Leadership Academy's systems leadership model of principles and behaviours. They have been designed to support the development of ICS's and PCN and are aimed at Primary, Secondary and Social Care Leaders. Our facilitator, Martin Fischer, will lead participants on an exploration of the move to systems thinking and working within the NHS, providing challenge, theory and opportunity for practice. Be prepared to be challenged, to interact and to be pro-active! In brief, the content covers:

Being: a theory-based workshop that will tackle the key elements of systems leadership, taking a holistic approach.

Relating and Communicating: embracing a collaborative culture in systemic transformation and change. Looking at working beyond boundaries, reimagining the systems in which we work.

Leading and Visioning: collective leadership, exploring overcoming barriers to systems thinking and working and leading confidently in what can be often volatile environments. An emphasis on mediating existing power relations and hierarchy and building ethical and sustainable change across systems.

Delivering – innovation across the systems: the series finishes with mobilising innovation and action across a system.

Who is it for?

This series are aimed at those in senior management roles in Primary, Secondary Care as well as leaders within Social Care. For those who are looking to advance their leadership capability in and across health and care systems and communities. There are 24 places and priority will be given to those working in Primary Care settings.
